Sisa (drug)

Sisa or shisha (Greek: σίσα) is a stimulant drug that became popular in Greece around 2009.[1] The basic ingredient is methamphetamine, with additives such as battery acid, engine oil, shampoo and salt.[2] It is also known as speed, crystal meth or simply meth.[3] It is abused by many homeless people in Athens, and causes dangerous side effects such as insomnia, delusions, heart attacks, and violent tendencies, due to being a highly impure and adulterated drug.[2][4] Routes of administration include smoking, snorting, and intravenous injection.[1]
